- Men's and women's perspective on ageing
- Two prominent authors with highly active lives
- Reconciliation as Purpose in Life

This is a unique book about growing old: Lea Ackermann, nun and fighter for women's rights, and well-travelled journalist Michael Albus have a conversation about life: Which experiences have shaped them up into old age? Do women and men age differently? How has their view of God and the world changed? These are answers beyond the clichés, both authentic and surprising: a look into the future.

About the author

Dr. Michael Albus has been the managing television editor for ZDF (second channel of German television broadcasting). He is honorary professor for religious didactics of media at the University of Freiburg and active in publishing.
